Has anybody found a cribbage board? If so, will they please bring same in to the Oyen News office.

Mr. H. Scott entertained a number of friends at a Stag party on Friday last, when a most enjoyable evening was spent. Mr. H. E. King, acting in the capacity of chef, gave entire satisfaction. His culinary triumphs were duly commented on by one of the guests in an after-supper speech, which voiced the sentiments of all present, although exception was made by one guest who said his chicken was burnt. After giving several patriotic toasts and a vote of thanks to the host, the party broke up.

E. Lindquist was in Athabasca on Monday.

A dance was held in Mr. Van Horne's new barn on Friday evening last when a good attendance was present. Another dance will be given there in October.

The German armies to the North and East of Paris have been hastily retreating during the past week. Their movements are being accelerated by the steady pursuit of the allied forces. The main body of the retreating German army appears to be heading for the Belgian frontier, while the left wing is endeavouring to gain shelter in German Lorraine. The retreat, like their wonderful advance, is being conducted by a series of forced marches, but the spirit of the men is very different to what it was when they were headed for Paris. Enormous quantities of ammunition and stores have been abandoned by them in their flight. Cannons and machine-guns have been left behind because their exhausted horses could not even keep up with foot-sore infantry.

On the other hand it is asserted that the allies display no fatigue. Elated by recent victories they are untiring in their pursuit and keep close on the rear of the fleeing Germans, whom they harass night and day. It is generally believed that they will mass forces between the retreating armies and the temporary safety of the frontier. Large bodies of fresh troops are being rushed off to join in the pursuit. Portions of the allied army which have borne the brunt of the recent fighting are taking a brief but well earned rest in preparation for future action.

General Joffre's strategy is very favourably commented on by the majority of experts and those who doubted the wisdom of his methods when the allies were retreating before the German advance toward Paris.

Live and Let Live

A report is in circulation here that some of the merchants in Alaska are advising those who are receiving government assistance to purchase their supplies in Alaska, and not in this town, as the prices of the merchants here are twenty-five per cent. in advance of their price.

It is all right to get out after trade and boom the town you live in in a legitimate manner, but when it comes to a statement like that, which would give any credence to the report it is time for us to make the statement that we believe the merchants of this town sell their goods at prices which will compare favourably with those of any town along the line.

Do not prevaricate, Live, and Let Live.

now join in the chorus of praise which is being accorded the commander of the French armies.

A report states that preparations are being made by the Germans to make a stand against the allies on the banks of the river Ahse while another dispatch says they will resist the further advance of the allies on the heights to the north and northeast of Rheims.

Reports regarding operations in east Prussia are of a conflicting nature. Russian reports state that the army under the command of General Remnikoff has resumed the offensive and the investment of Konigsberg is still in progress, while reports from Berlin say that the Russian army has suffered a defeat nearly equal to the Russian disaster at Allenstein. It is generally believed, however, that the dispatches from Petrograd are the more reliable.

The sinking of the German protected cruiser Hela by a submarine of the allied fleet, is announced in an official statement issued at Berlin.

The German submarine which recently sank the British cruiser Pathfinder, with a loss of 246 lives, is reported to have been sunk by the fire from several British cruisers.

The passage of the Home Rule Bill and the Welsh Disestablishment Bill will be suspended until after the war.

Col. Repington, military critic of the Times, writes: "General Joffre must be congratulated on having seized the psychological moment for his counter stroke and for having engaged with his whole strength. 'Our eyes are naturally fixed mainly upon the deeds of our own army, but we must not forget that we occupy a comparatively small part of the allied line and that throughout the rest of the front the French armies have for four or five days not only withstood victoriously the German attacks but have in nearly all cases gained ground and even the Germans back."

"We still seek on every side for the reason which caused the German change of direction last week. The change laid open the German right to an offensive return, which has been deflected with refreshing vigour, and leads many to believe that there is a general lack of confidence in the success of the German plans."
